Balmore Drù

HIGHLAND SINGLE MALT SCOTCH WHISKY

In Balmore, to the east of Scotland, life is uneventful. This is why nature there is unspoilt. It's pure and resilient at the same time. That's where we were inspired to create a selection of authentic Malts from the best Scottish distilleries that could express the hidden richness of this land.

This particular malt hails from the northern Highland distillery – Teaninich, one of the very few distilleries in Scotland to use a mash filter rather than the more common mash tun. The result yields a grassy character, reminiscent of Japanese green tea. We have matured this whisky in ex-bourbon casks, which imparts delicious notes of vanilla and indulgent toffee.

Fresh, fruity and floral scents are complemented by nutty notes with a spicy finish. Apple pie with vanilla custard, green tea, aniseed, freshly mowed grass and just a hint of black pepper to round it off.

SPEYSIDE SINGLE MALT SCOTCH WHISKY

In Balmore, to the east of Scotland, life is uneventful. This is why nature there is unspoilt. It's pure and resilient at the same time. That's where we were inspired to create a selection of authentic Malts from the best Scottish distilleries that could express the hidden richness of this land.

This whisky originated from Auchroisk, a Speyside distillery, and spent most of its years maturing in ex-bourbon casks. It then developed its gorgeous red hue in first-fill Madeira barrels for the final chapter of its maturation, delivering an indulgent hint of wine into the whisky. A testament to the craft of maturation, it boasts an elegantly complex profile.

The influence of Madeira barrels is clear from the beginning. Light fruit and floral scents are complemented by wine notes with hints of malt, spice and tobacco. A touch of cocoa hovering in the background completes the picture.

🍇 Grape variety — 100% Primitivo

🍴 Gastronomy — ideal in combination with spicy grilled meat, roasts and stuffed ravioli pasta with rich tomato sauce. The recommended serving temperature is 16-18°

👂 Tasting characteristics — the wine has dark and intense ruby color. Aroma opens tones of tar, licorice and red berries. Full-bodied, warm and fruity in taste, the wine shows a dense body with strong tannins and a long aftertaste.

The grapes are then fermented and macerated with the skins at controlled temperatures of 23-25°C in stainless steel tanks.

📖 Curiosity — Primitivo variety traditionally grows in Puglia (the "heel" of Italy), where it was introduced in the 18th century. DNA fingerprinting revealed that it is genetically equivalent to the Croatian grapes Crljenak Kaštelanski and Tribidrag. The grape found its way to the United States in the mid-19th century and became known by variations of the name "Zinfandel". The grapes typically produce a robust red wine.

Grapes are then placed in tanks at controlled temperature for the alcoholic fermentation. During this process, the skins are kept in contact with the must obtaining a prolonged maceration. This process enables a better color and aromas extraction. After the alcoholic fermentation, the malolactic fermentation takes place and, finally, the wine is then aged in wood for a short time. Before bottling, we proceed with tangential filtration.

💧 Color — red

🍷 Grape variety — Sangiovese

🍷 Gastronomy — it is ideal in combination with spicy pasta dishes, ideal with roasts, steaks and grilled veal. The recommended serving temperature is 16-18°

🍷 Vinification — The grapes for this wine grow vineyards planted in Chianti DOCG growing area. Mature grapes are harvested, de-stemmed and pressed. The entire process of vinification takes place in stainless steel tanks: after the alcoholic fermentation at controlled temperature, the wine undergoes the malolactic fermentation, a process that lowers total acidity and makes wine seem rounder and fuller in flavor. The wine is then finally bottled during the following spring.

📖 Curiosity — One of the most famous Italian wines is certainly Chianti, whose history dates back to 1872 when a Florentine politician named Bettino Ricasoli discovered the Chianti's wine recipe, a Tuscan high-quality wine able to compete internationally with the great French wines. Today this Tuscan wine is one of Italy's most well-known and recognizable wines because of its strong and powerful flavor.
